Save time, stress and shoe leather

Take the leg work out of financing your property by engaging a mortgage broker.

If you're buying your first home or investment property – or looking to move to a bigger and better one – speaking to a mortgage broker is a good first step.

A broker will sit down with you, usually in your own home or another location convenient for you, and show you the range of loans available from different lenders. They will then help you narrow them down to a loan that might suit your needs.

The role of mortgage brokers has evolved. As well as identifying the most appropriate mortgage they're becoming a key partner in helping borrowers secure other finance – such as personal loans, or leasing – as well as insurance and property-related services.

Assessing your needs

A mortgage broker will take the time to understand your needs, discuss your financial circumstances, and identify your loan requirements.

As a first step, they'll discuss your property goals, factoring in your loan requirements in light of your lifestyle, job, family and other aspects. They'll also discuss the type of documents needed to assist you to make a loan application – such as pay slips, tax returns, and personal bank statements.

Once they have a clear understanding of your financial situation and goals, your broker will be able to advise you on your home loan options.

Comparing loans

As part of their service, your mortgage broker will recommend one or more home loans that fit your borrowing needs. They will be able to search through their database – which usually includes multiple lenders, zoom in on specific loan products that meet your requirements and discuss the product's details and features with you.

The sophisticated software many brokers now use will not only give you a broad view of your lending options, but will also provide an analysis on important specifics of the loan that have been identified as meeting your needs. You can then make the decision on the product you'd like to select.

Managing the loan process – from start to finish

When you've chosen the loan you're comfortable with, your broker can help you fill out the necessary paperwork to get the loan process underway.

This might include submitting your home loan application on your behalf, communicating with all the relevant parties and managing the entire process until your home loan is approved.

If you decide you want to switch home loans or refinance at a later stage, your mortgage broker can also help you source new loans that will suit your financial needs and help you through the process every step of the way.

Your mortgage broker can also assist with your other finance needs – such as arranging home and contents insurance, income protection insurance or personal loans.

Your mortgage broker will recommend one or more home loans that fit your needs.

Sourcing a broker

As they neared their 40th birthdays, Colin and Kathy started thinking about how they were going to fund their retirement.

While both wanted to continue to work well into their 60s, they were concerned that their superannuation would not be sufficient to sustain a reasonable level of living once retired.

Colin and Kathy had been thinking for some time about purchasing an investment property. Although Colin had bought and sold shares to a small degree since his twenties, they felt that property would be more secure and less affected by shifting economic environments.

After speaking with some friends and family that had purchased an investment property, they decided to engage a mortgage broker to help them choose a loan that suited their situation and determine a strategy for managing their debt.

Colin and Kathy found an advertisement for a group that sounded ideal, so Colin checked their credentials with the Mortgage and Finance Association of Australia (MFAA) to make sure they were dealing with a reputable company.

After a quick initial conversation, Patrick their broker felt confident that Colin and Kathy would qualify for an investment loan and organised a convenient time for them to get together to assess their options in more detail, including a solid assessment of their current mortgage and financial position.

By sitting down with their broker, Colin and Kathy were able to get a good understanding of their borrowing capacity, and could now start researching the market for an investment property in their price bracket. After a month of searching, they found a two bedroom apartment with a sitting tenant that was yielding approximately 5.5 per cent per annum.

With solid rental returns they could comfortably manage to repay the loan on their own home while adding $50 a week to cover the repayments on their investment property.

Tips for saving your deposit

Saving for that all important deposit can be tough, but here are three winning tips to help set you on your way to home ownership, fast!

Put your goals in writing:

Setting a financial goal will make it much easier to plan and save successfully. Make a conscious effort to track your expenses so you can see where your money's going and cut back where you can. Small sacrifices, such as taking the bus instead of a taxi, cutting back on buying coffee or bringing your lunch to work can also go a long way towards helping you save.

Beat the credit monster:

Credit card debt, unpaid bills and personal loan repayments can be major setbacks to your saving efforts. As part of your saving strategy get these debts paid off. Start by paying off your debts that have the highest interest rate – typically your credit card. If you can't pay it off in one lump sum, ensure that you pay more than the minimum monthly repayment. You'll not only slash your debt, you'll also have extra funds to channel into other debt commitments or even savings.

Make your savings work harder for you:

Making cutbacks on your lifestyle is one thing, but putting that money to use is another. Remove the temptation to spend your savings by arranging a set amount to be taken out of your pay each month and put directly into a savings account. Shop around, and seek a high interest rate savings account to get the best returns – many banks now offer an online high interest account.

Why use a mortgage broker?

- Save time – your broker can do the groundwork for you, making it easier to find a loan suited to your needs. Moreover, they'll manage the application and approval process.
- Industry expertise – your mortgage broker knows what loans are out there, so you can expect to receive current information on the most suitable loan options available for your needs.
- Reduce stress – your broker can reduce stress by helping you source the most appropriate type of mortgage, manage the paperwork and keep you updated during the whole mortgage process.
- Centralise your finances – with a sound understanding of your financial position, your broker can also assist you to arrange other financial requirements, such as insurance and personal loans.

Switching for a better deal

Your life never stands still, and neither should your mortgage. If change is afoot, it might be time to search for a more suitable product.

If your loan doesn't suit your lifestyle or personal situation you could be wasting thousands of dollars a year on extra interest and fees.

You may be able to refinance and find a loan that's more appropriate for your needs, with more suitable features and a competitive interest rate to match.

There are now more alternatives to mainstream bank products available that may better suit your needs and personal situation.

If you feel that your loan is no longer right for you, speak with your mortgage broker.

If you're striving to be mortgage free, faster, there's a good chance there may be a more appropriate product to meet your needs.

Here are some key reasons to prompt a review of your mortgage:

Pay off your mortgage faster!

If you're striving to be mortgage free, there's a good chance there may be a more appropriate product to meet your needs. Some mortgage products are designed to motivate borrowers to repay their mortgages quickly, so now is the perfect time to talk to your mortgage broker and consider whether a new loan will see you on the road to financial freedom – fast!

Better interest rates and lower repayments

Rates and mortgage deals are constantly on the move. To make the most of a competitive mortgage market, you might want to evaluate the loan product you currently have. For example, you may want to go for a lower variable-rate, or lock into a fixed-rate. Break costs can be expensive though, so you'll need to check that you'll come out ahead when all costs are considered.

Consolidate your debt

Consolidating your debts, such as credit cards or personal loans, into your home loan can save you thousands of dollars in interest charges. Rolling your debts into one monthly or fortnightly repayment can also help make juggling your finances a little easier, while improving your cash flow to boot.

Avoid monthly fees and charges

Some lenders charge a monthly service fee – further adding to your debt. Competition between lenders has increased and some now waive administration fees, so refinancing your home loan with another provider can be a smart move to help cut your mortgage costs.

Unlocking equity

As you pay off your mortgage you'll accumulate equity in your home. As long as you are capable of meeting your loan repayments, refinancing your mortgage can help you tap into the value that you've built up, using it for other purposes such as purchasing an investment property.

Capitalise on government incentives

It can be hard for first time buyers to get a foothold on the home ownership ladder, but take heart – there are various government grants and concessions that can help offset some of the expenses when getting started.

Before you start searching for your dream home, take some time to learn more about these benefits. If you'd like an explanation on any government incentives give your mortgage broker a call.

First Home Owner Grant

First home buyers across Australia may be eligible for the Federal Government's First Home Owner Grant (FHOG) which is a one-off, tax-free $7,000 gift from the Government.

As long as you're a first time buyer above 18 years of age, and an Australian citizen or permanent resident, you'll most likely be eligible for the grant.

There are some financial advantages to being a first time buyer.

The grant is administered by each state and can differ depending on each state's respective legislation. For example, in Victoria first time buyers can also benefit from the First Home Buyer Bonus of $2,000 for established homes and $11,000 for new properties. Both apply for properties below $600,000.

For more information on the FHOG in your state visit www.firsthome.gov.au or speak with your mortgage broker.

Stamp duty breaks and concessions

Australia's State Governments have introduced breaks for the stamp duty associated with a property purchase.

Stamp duty is a tax applied to certain property transitions. When land is sold, transferred or leased, for example, stamp duty is generally payable.

It is usually the buyer, not the seller, who is liable to pay stamp duty. Payment must generally be made within three months of entering into the contract for purchasing the property.

The amount of stamp duty payable depends on the value of the property and the amount for which it is sold, transferred or leased. It is calculated on its market value or the price paid by the buyer.

Each State Government has its own rules surrounding stamp duty on property purchases. For this reason, the exemptions and concessions available differ from state to state.

Generally, however, first home buyers, vacant land holders, and farm buyers may be entitled to some exemption or discount on stamp duty. So it pays to check out whether any apply to you through contacting the revenue office in your state or territory.

Note: Details are current as at print date and should be confirmed with your local Office of State Revenue or equivalent body.

Borrowing within your means

While your lender will give you a maximum borrowing amount, it's essential that you determine your own borrowing capacity when searching for your new home.

The choices you make when taking out a mortgage have long lasting implications – so you need to approach borrowing with a healthy attitude.

How much you can borrow and how much you should borrow can be two very different things. While your lender should not let you borrow more than you can afford, ultimately the choice is yours – so be careful not to over commit yourself.

Ultimately the choice is yours – so be careful not to over commit yourself.

When determining your borrowing capability, start by measuring your income against expenses, including your mortgage repayments. A good rule of thumb is that no more than 35 per cent of your gross monthly income should go towards servicing your mortgage.

Lenders use a similar method to work out how much to lend you. As a general rule, the bigger deposit you have and the higher your income, the more they should be willing to lend. This is particularly the case following the global economic crisis as banks have become even more risk averse.

Here are some factors to take into account when determining how much you should borrow rather than how much you can:

How much debt can I handle?

Don't over commit. Borrowing too much can be a big strain on your personal life and lifestyle. Think about what aspects of your lifestyle you may be willing to give up, and those that you can't.

Am I being realistic?

Houses are like stepping stones – it's probably best to start with something affordable and move towards your dream home as your personal earning capacity and equity grows.

What are my plans?

Think about what the future holds – both personally and financially. Are you a one or two income household and is this likely to change in the future?

What about interest rates?

Consider how any rate rise will impact on your ability to make repayments and factor that in when setting your borrowing limits. And don't forget, there are added extras when purchasing a house, like solicitors and application fees, as well as ongoing commitments including council rates and utility bills – so consider these costs when determining how much you can borrow.

How interest rates affect your mortgage

While rates move up and down you should always consider the impact they will have on your mortgage.

The rate of interest you'll pay on your mortgage depends on a combination of factors. This can include the Reserve Bank of Australia's (RBA) cash rate, your lender and the type of loan you have.

When working through your loan options with your mortgage broker there are a number of issues to keep in mind to ensure you're getting the most appropriate mortgage for your needs.

The type of loan

Different loan types tend to come with different interest rates. So if your loan has a range of features, such as re-draw, offsets or early repayment facilities, you'll usually pay a little more in interest.

Alternatively, while a basic loan doesn't have all the bells and whistles of other products the interest rate is typically lower.

When assessing which loan best suits your needs, ask your broker to explain how the different features work to assess whether they are worth paying a higher rate for.

For example, if you're looking to drive your mortgage down quickly or would like flexibility in your repayments, it may be worth paying for the features needed to do this most effectively.

The type of rate

Rates move up and down in line with the current economic cycle. Borrowers can choose to fix their home loan rate – or 'lock in' a rate for a set period of time.

If you're considering this option, it's important to remember that a fixed interest rate can be higher than the current variable rate. However, if rates are on the rise and you're concerned they'll keep going up, fixing your rate will ensure consistency in repayments each month.

Alternatively a split loan can give you the best of both a fixed-rate and variable-rate loan. This means that if rates rise, a proportion of your loan will be protected – minimising the impact of higher monthly repayments. If on the other hand rates fall your fixed-rate will remain higher and the variable part of the loan will fall.

It's important to remember that break costs can apply when you break a fixed term loan.

Ultimately the choice is yours – so be careful not to over commit yourself.

Lessen the impact of a rate rise

Should rates rise, there are a number of effective ways to lessen the impact on your finances:

Factor in possible hikes – Leave room for a number of interest rate rises when you assess your borrowing capabilities. You may have to reduce your mortgage amount or purchase property that's at the lower end of your price range as a result.

Interest only – If you're really struggling to keep up with rate hikes, you can consider changing to an interest-only loan. While not an effective long-term strategy for owner-occupiers, it might be an option while you deal with the here and now.

Refinance – Your situation may have changed from when you first took out your mortgage – for example you've now only got one person in the household earning a salary. Rates between lenders can change. Ask your broker what mortgages are available that better suit your situation.

Lender's Mortgage Insurance

Lender's Mortgage Insurance can help you enter the market sooner.

Lender's Mortgage Insurance (LMI) helps Australian homeowners enter the market earlier through allowing you to borrow a higher percentage of a property's value.

For first home buyers, particularly those struggling to save a deposit but more than comfortable to meet their mortgage repayments, it can be a key tool to break free of the rental trap.

Through financing a higher proportion of a property's purchase price lenders take on a higher level of risk that you will fail to meet mortgage repayments, and the property needs to be repossessed and resold.

LMI is therefore paid by you to insure your lender against loss should this happen. It is important to be aware that LMI only covers the lender if you default, not you.

The bigger the percentage of the property's purchase price you have to borrow, the greater the amount you're likely to pay on insurance. So if your deposit is less than 20 per cent of the value of the property, and especially if you have no deposit at all, you will need to factor LMI into your home loan.

Remember that in some cases lenders may require LMI for lower LVR loans, depending on the type and style of property you're purchasing – for example some inner-city apartments or rural land.

LMI is usually paid as a one-off lump sum at the time of settlement but in many cases it can also be added into the loan amount and paid off over the life of the loan – a term known as capitalising the LMI. Speak with your broker to assess whether this option is right for you.

*If you default on your loan,
Lender's Mortgage Insurance
only covers the lender not you.*

The pick of the bunch

There's a huge choice of home loans available, but to find your right match you'll need to do a bit of homework.

Making yourself familiar with a few of the popular products available will give you a strong head start when discussing your loan options with your broker.

Here are just a few of the product types you're sure to come across:

Basic home loans

Basic home loans or 'no frills' loans offer borrowers a loan with a low interest rate. A popular choice among first home buyers, a basic home loan's interest rate is often half to one per cent below the standard variable rate, which is sometimes combined with minimal ongoing fees. Drawbacks include limited features, less flexibility, and additional charges if you decide to switch loans or pay the loan off sooner.

Fixed-rate home loans

Worried about rising interest rates? A fixed-rate home loan will allow you to fix your interest rate for a specific period, usually from one to five years. It can be a sound option when interest rates are on the rise, or in times of economic uncertainty.

Should interest rates plummet, however, you'll still have to pay off your mortgage at the fixed-rate until the end of the agreed period. Additionally, keep in mind that you may be charged a fee should you decide to break your fixed term or switch to another product.

Standard variable-rate home loans

Considered a popular mainstream choice, standard variable-rate home loans allow you to borrow money for a set period of time, during which you make regular repayments based on the current interest rate. The interest rate can vary depending on fluctuations in the official cash rate.

Split-rate home loans

Want the best of both worlds? A split-rate home loan offers both flexibility and security.

A good product for both first time and existing borrowers, split loans allow you to customise your loan's interest rate as you see fit: fixing a portion of your interest rate to give certainty to your monthly repayments should rates increase, but also flexibility through taking out a variable-rate portion.

Interest-only home loans

Interest-only loans offer borrowers lower repayment options, while maintaining many of a traditional loan's features.

This type of loan allows you to pay only the interest component on a mortgage; it does not reduce the principal component. They are a popular choice for investors seeking good capital appreciation on their investments.

It isn't just about getting the best interest rate, it's about finding a loan product that suits your individual needs and situation.

Products at a glance

Basic home loans

Pros

Interest rates are often half to one per cent below the standard variable rate.

Cons

Limited features, less flexibility and possible penalty fees for early loan repayment.

Low-doc home loans

Pros

Can help you enter the property market if you're a self-employed, contract or seasonal worker without regular income or proof of income.

Cons

Typically have higher interest rates. You may also have to pay Lenders Mortgage Insurance (LMI).

Standard variable-rate home loans

Pros

Make regular repayments based on the current interest rate. Effective if rates do not rise.

Cons

Should interest rates increase, your regular mortgage repayments will rise.

Fixed-rate home loans

Pros

Fix your interest rate for a specific period, giving certainty to regular repayment amounts.

Cons

Should interest rates fall you'll still need to repay your mortgage at the agreed fixed rate. There are potentially also high loan break costs.

Split-rate loan

Pros

Fix a portion of your interest rate to give certainty to monthly repayments while also benefit from a variable-rate portion should rates drop.

Cons

If interest rates do drop you'll be left paying a higher rate for your fixed-rate portion.

Interest-only home loans

Pros

Pay only the interest component on your mortgage.

Cons

Repayments do not reduce the principal component of your mortgage.

Boost your buying power through co-ownership

Buying through co-ownership is quickly becoming a popular strategy for budding investors hoping to enter the property market but without the capacity to do it alone.

Through pooling resources with a friend or family member you can increase your buying power. There are a number of other benefits as well.

A joint purchase, for example, can help ease the deposit burden as you'll only need to pay a portion of the deposit. There are also other costs that can be split, such as stamp duty, legal fees and maintenance.

However, there are a number of pitfalls that you need to be aware of when purchasing via co-ownership. Importantly, you need to pick your partner carefully and ensure you have the same overall goals.

Key to this is a firm legal document outlining the partnership and the conditions for selling the property, plus other associated issues. There are also a number of different options for financing the investment – give your broker a call to discuss what strategies are available to you.

Low-doc home loans

If you're a self-employed, contract or seasonal worker and do not have a regular income, a low-doc loan may be a solution.

While making home ownership a possibility for a cross section of Australian workers that previously found it difficult to secure a mainstream bank loan, most low-doc home loans typically have higher interest rates.

Low-doc home loans are also not as readily available – or have more restrictions – following the global financial crisis as lenders have sought to minimise their risk exposure; so you'll need to shop around. Your lender may also require you to take out Lender's Mortgage Insurance in order to secure a loan.

If you're a self-employed, contract or seasonal worker and do not have a regular income a low doc loan may be a solution.

MORTGAGE

How to manage your mortgage more effectively

While there's no getting out of mortgage repayments (unless you strike a financial windfall!), there are ways to make paying off your loan easier.

Here are five proven tips to better manage your mortgage.

Set a budget

Work out your expenses (fortnightly or monthly) and factor in your mortgage repayments.

You might need to cut back on spending in certain areas to make sure your mortgage is a priority. Keep a diary of your spending and stick to your budget.

Cut your debt

Reduce the number of credit cards you have (ideally down to one) as well as their credit limits, and only use them sparingly. Having a mortgage means taking control of your spending.

Just keep in mind that you may be charged a fee for making additional payments on your mortgage depending on the type of loan you have.

Direct debit

Arrange for your mortgage repayments to be direct debited from your pay, so you always make them on time.

Pay more than the minimum

Split your monthly mortgage repayment in two and make your repayments fortnightly, helping to save on interest charges. Through this strategy you will essentially make 13 monthly repayments over the course of a year, rather than 12 – which will drive your principal down and potentially save thousands in interest repayments over the life of your loan.

When extra funds come your way, like tax refunds, put them straight into your home loan as well – it can really make a difference in the long term.

A small change can really make a difference to your loan over the long term.

Don't be late

If you're struggling to meet your repayments, speak to your broker. Refinancing may be one option available. It may be better to extend the loan term rather than to default.

Get a head start with a pre-approved loan

Competition for property can be fierce. Put yourself ahead of the pack with a pre-approved loan.

What's pre-approval?

Sometimes referred to as an approval-in-principle, pre-approval is a general indication of how much you're able to borrow based on the information you provide to your lender.

Although subject to terms and conditions, a pre-approval basically gives you the green light on your home loan even if you've not yet decided on a particular property.

The amount of the pre-approval is usually determined by your ability to meet the loan repayments. Most pre-approvals are valid for up to three months.

There are usually terms and conditions attached to a pre-approval. You will most certainly need to provide more information to secure the loan once you've located the home you wish to purchase in order to satisfy all the lender's documentation requirements, for example.

How do you get pre-approval?

To kick start the pre-approval process you'll need to give your mortgage broker some key documents.

These should include proof of your income – such as a letter from your employer or copies of your pay slips – proof of identity, and details of any assets you own.

Other paperwork might include details of any existing loan commitments and limits on credit cards. Once your financial status has been given the tick of approval by the lender, you'll receive a pre-approval notification that will see you on your way to home ownership.

A pre-approval basically gives you the green light on your home loan, even if you've not yet decided on a property.

Why obtain pre-approval?

- Peace of mind – a pre-approval gives you the confidence of knowing how much you can borrow when buying a property.
- Jump the queue – having your home loan pre-approved enables you to seize the opportunity and act quickly when you find the property you want.
- Stronger bargaining power – a pre-approval can sometimes help you negotiate a better price with the seller, especially if there are fewer stringent conditions upon the sale.
- Ability to bid at auctions – under the conditions of a cash contract, a pre-approval allows you to bid at auction for the property of your choice.

Ready to make a move!

Your step-by-step checklist for being home owner ready!

Arranging your finances

- Contact your mortgage broker and arrange an appointment
- Arrange supporting documents (i.e. pay slips, group certificates, credit card statements and other relevant documents)
- Assess lending capabilities with your broker, shortlist loan options and determine the most appropriate loan from the shortlist
- Submit loan application with all supporting documents
- Obtain pre-approval

*Note: Finance can be secured before or after you find a property. However borrowers should consider a pre-approval so that they have a true measure of their borrowing capacity before they commit to a purchase. Pre-approvals are usually always subject to further conditions.

Buying your house

- Engage a solicitor or conveyancer to check sale contract
- Place offer for home/win at auction
- Complete building and pest inspections, strata and title searches
- Sign contracts along with submitting agreed deposit
- Arrange insurance (contents, building and/or income protection)
- Process first home owner grant (FHOG)
- Complete settlement
- Pick up keys

Moving in

- If currently renting, advise landlord that you're moving
- Collect bond from rental agency
- Arrange disconnection of utilities and cleaning of old premises (if required)
- Arrange quotes from removalist companies/schedule moving times
- Connect the gas, electricity and other utilities
- Connect pay TV and internet
- Connect new phone line
- Redirect mail (can be arranged through your local post office)
- Redirect newspaper delivery
- Advise family and friends of new address/phone details
- Clean up home before you move in
- Move the family in!

Better buying

Arm yourself with some essential buying skills for purchasing property via auction or private sale.

Both private sale and auction have positive and negative points from a buying perspective. Once you've found your dream home, keep these points in mind when purchasing under either situation.

Buying via private treaty

A private sale is popular from a buyer's perspective for several reasons, but top of the list would have to be the control and flexibility it can offer.

Note: Terms and conditions of this buying method may vary according to state.

Pros

In a private sale, as a buyer you're in a strong position to negotiate the terms and conditions of the sale to suit you. You can make several offers over a period of time, without rushing or being locked into a binding contract. There is typically a cooling-off period after your offer has been accepted which also gives you the chance to pull out of the sale should you change your mind.

Cons

On the flipside, one of the downsides of a private sale is the possibility that multiple offers may be made to the vendor without your knowledge. This can work against you if another party makes a higher offer that is accepted by the vendor, when you might have been willing to make a similar offer eventually.

It's important to know how each process works and how that could affect the outcome.

Buying at auction

Purchasing a property at auction involves bidding against other parties, and the competition can get hot! For this reason, purchasing at auction is often preferred by experienced or confident buyers, but less experienced or first time buyers can purchase at auction too.

Pros

Buying a home at auction allows you to see your competition face-to-face, and get an idea of how many other parties are interested in the property. It also gives you the chance to make a higher offer than a competing buyer, something a private sale doesn't always give you the scope to do. Moreover, there's the advantage of knowing the property is yours there and then, rather than having to spend weeks or months in negotiation.

Cons

One of the disadvantages of buying at auction is the limited scope to negotiate the terms and conditions of the sale contract. After a final bid is accepted, there is no cooling-off period – you must put the deposit down immediately. The other possible downfall is the tendency for competition to drive up the purchase price. Be careful that you don't get tempted in the heat of the moment into making a bid that's beyond what you can afford, or have budgeted, to spend.

Buying tips for private sale and auction

Private purchase

- Get a mortgage pre-approval – it will establish your credentials as a serious buyer and may give you leverage to negotiate.
- Do not sign any contracts without the approval of your solicitor.
- Insert an acceptance date into your offer by which time it will lapse if it is not officially accepted.

Auction

- Attend a few auctions to familiarise yourself with the process before you take the plunge.
- Obtain a copy of the auction rules and conditions and make sure you understand them well. Also have your solicitor review the contract before you attend the auction, and ask them to negotiate conditions on your behalf – for example longer settlement terms or less deposit down.

- Thoroughly examine the property before bidding at auction, including pest and building inspections.
- Most importantly, set your maximum bidding limit and stick to it.

Before you buy – inspections and pre-purchase checks

Use this checklist to make sure the property you wish to purchase doesn't contain any hidden surprises.

Check required

Completed

Have a qualified builder inspect the property and provide a professional condition report. Highlight any structural problems or issues, such as rising damp or old wiring. Obtain quotes for repair.

Organise pest inspection.

Check the local council's building regulations should you plan to renovate and determine any restrictions that may apply before you buy.

Have all legal aspects relating to the land and title checked by your solicitor or conveyancer.

Check with the council on zoning or any upcoming developments nearby – particularly those in your immediate neighbourhood, such as new roads and highways or high-rise, high-density unit developments.

Ensure all appliances work (i.e. dishwashers, stoves, hot water systems).

How to use the equity in your home to finance an investment property

Realise your property investment goals through capitalising on the equity built up in your home.

The idea of property investment is one that appeals to many Australians but sadly often overlooked because of the misconception that it is only within the reach of the wealthy.

The reality is that with the right finance, planning and strategy an investment property may be easier to achieve than you think.

Ease the deposit burden

One of the key challenges to breaking into property investment is raising a deposit, but there are solutions.

Property buyers are typically required to contribute 20 per cent of the property's value, and for some this can be a stumbling block. But existing home owners may be able to unlock equity – or the increased value – that's built up in their own home to cover some or even all of the down payment on an investment property.

The following scenario illustrates how borrowers can capitalise on the equity in their homes to purchase an investment property.

Example

Dan and Jessica bought their four bedroom family home in Rockhampton in 2003 for $247,000 putting down a $49,400 deposit and taking out a loan for $197,600

The couple recently decided that they'd look at breaking into the investment market so they contacted their mortgage broker to discuss finance.

Their broker suggested that they get a valuation of their home, and they discovered that it was now estimated at $480,000.

Over the years Dan and Jessica had paid $48,000 off their original loan leaving $149,600 owing on the property.

Today's valuation of the property, less the outstanding loan, left them with $330,400 worth of equity.

Their broker suggested that they consider refinancing their own home to the loan ratio of 50 per cent to free up some equity for an investment. Based on the current property value and assuming they could afford the repayments, they would be able to borrow $240,000 – making an additional $90,400 available for investment purposes.

This strategy appealed to Dan and Jessica because otherwise they would have needed to liquidate their managed funds to raise the deposit for the investment property and this was not a viable option as these fund balances were low due to recent poor performance.

They decided to put down a 20 per cent deposit on a $350,000 two bedroom apartment and take out an 80 per cent loan.

The deposit came to $70,000 leaving a further $20,400 to cover stamp duty and other expenses while a $280,000 loan covered the rest of the purchase price.

Now that Dan and Jessica had a bigger loan on their home their repayments had gone up, but they were pleased to discover that the repayment on their investment property was almost covered by the $385 weekly rental the investment property was generating.

And because the couple managed their investment themselves they reduced the overheads against the gross rent. By taking out an interest-only loan they also minimised their monthly outgoings and improved their cash flow.

You may be able to realise your investment goals by putting your current property to work for you.

Help for first time investors through LMI

First time buyers can also crack the investment market without having to scrape together a huge deposit.

Traditionally lenders would look for a 20 per cent deposit from property buyers but today it's possible to borrow up to 95 per cent of a property's value with the help of lenders mortgage insurance (LMI).

LMI protects the lender against the risk associated with providing borrowers with a higher percentage loan in the event that they default.

The cost of LMI can often be added to the overall loan amount, reducing the initial outlay.

Ready, set, buy – the role of buyer's agents

It's well known that real estate agents act on behalf of the vendor, but did you know that there are also professionals that provide a service to buyers?

Buyer's agents are gaining popularity with time poor buyers and those with less experience or confidence in the market. They can be engaged to identify suitable properties and even take on the negotiations with real estate agents or vendors.

They are particularly handy in markets where there's a certain amount of uncertainty, such as the current climate where prices are climbing rapidly in some areas and stagnant in others.

Some buyers seek the services of an agent to avoid trawling through property listings, pounding the pavement visiting open houses and haggling with estate agents.

But for others, engaging a buyer's agent can take much of the emotion out of negotiating, which some agents claim can result in a better purchase price.

Buyer's agents are experienced in dealing with real estate agents and have an in-depth understanding of the market as well as the sales process – which can certainly be an advantage for those who lack confidence.

For investors it's worth noting that the cost of engaging a buyer's agent may be tax deductible as with many of the other associated costs involved with a property purchase. However owner-occupiers will probably have to foot the full bill.

Charges can vary from a flat fee to a percentage of the property purchase depending on the services provided. You may be able to pay a smaller amount if you are only after representation at an auction.

If engaging a buyer's agent appeals to you, look for a recommendation from friends or your broker and make sure you check their credentials, fees and charges carefully before engaging them.

Buyer's agents can provide services such as assistance with finding suitable properties, negotiating the purchase terms – ideal if you are pressed for time or lacking experience.

Preparing the family for the big move

While moving into a new home can be very exciting for some family members, it can be more challenging for others.

One of the most daunting parts of moving can be sharing the news with the kids. Communication is the key to a smooth transition, so keep some of these tips in mind when the time comes!

Share from the start

If you have children, it's best to break the news early on. They will feel involved and it will also give them time to get used to the whole idea. Chat about their fears and uncertainties and try to be understanding.

Give your children plenty of opportunities to ask questions and share their thoughts.

Be positive

Your attitude will influence your family, so be enthusiastic. Be realistic – adjusting could take time and not every family member will be as excited about the move as you are. Older children in particular could be very reluctant to leave their social network.

Be prepared

Make a list of the positives about the new house or neighbourhood, so you can mention these when you break the news. Think about the possible negatives as well so you can be prepared to tackle those head on.

Inform them

Provide your kids with lots of information about the new house and area, and what they can expect. If they will be attending a local school, find out as much information about it beforehand and pay a visit before the move. This should help them feel more secure and make the adjustment easier.

Keep them involved

Younger children may be frightened if they have not experienced a move before. Giving them the opportunity to help pack a special “moving kit” of their own, with prized toys and activities for the road or to keep them busy while you unpack, gives them a sense of control and security, as well as being a lot of fun.

Older children could enjoy the opportunity to be involved in decoration of their new living space – which room, where their furniture would look best or selecting a new colour for the walls!

Protecting your purchase

When it comes to buying your new home, the insurance is just as important as the home itself.

There are a number of types of insurance you'll need to consider: building or home insurance, contents insurance and mortgage protection insurance to name a few.

Building or home insurance

Depending on the type of loan you've taken out, it may be compulsory for you to take out building or home insurance to safeguard the lender's interest in the property. Even if this is not mandatory, it is strongly advisable.

Building or home insurance covers you for damages to your property or its fixtures. Depending on your level of cover, you may be able to protect yourself for anything from fire and storm damage to burglary.

Essentially, home insurance covers the cost of restoring your property to its present condition if it is damaged. Make sure you read and understand the policy as insurance cover can vary from issuer to issuer. Also, don't underestimate insurance costs, as you may end up out of pocket should disaster strike.

Contents insurance

Contents insurance protects you in the case of loss or damage to your personal belongings and items in your home, such as whitegoods, clothing and furniture. While you may already have contents insurance, it's a good idea to update it after a move into a new property – especially if you've decked out your new house with brand new furniture and appliances.

You'll usually have a choice between two types of contents insurance: a policy that replaces the old goods with new ones or you can opt for an indemnity policy, under which you'll receive the depreciated value of what was damaged.

Mortgage protection insurance

Mortgage protection, while not mandatory for borrowers, can be an effective tool to help cover your mortgage should you find yourself unemployed, unable to work through injury or are diagnosed with a serious illness. Typically mortgage protection insurance covers the cost of your mortgage for the period of the claim, providing you time to re-enter the workforce or focus on regaining your health.

Speak with your broker if you'd like more information on any of these types of insurance – in many cases they can help arrange a policy for you.

Tips to finding the right insurance

Take time to shop around: Compare the price of each policy with the cover offered – don't go for a cheap deal with very little cover or pay top money for cover you don't really need.

Engage specialists: Speak with your broker for options on the insurances related to your new property purchase – they'll be able to arrange the policies for you or alternatively refer you to a specialist.

Keep documents secure: Remember to keep copies of your insurance policies, receipts and photographs away from the house, as they won't be much help to you if they are damaged. Leave a set at your parents or a friend's house, for example.

New home, new community

Help ease the transition to your new home, by having all the little things organised ahead of the move.

Moving house can be one of life's more exciting experiences, it can also be one of the most stressful.

- Mail: Keeping on top of bills is a must, so make sure your post is redirected to your new address as soon as possible. Make sure you remember to notify your bank and any other service providers or regular billers about the move. The last thing you want is to be late in paying an account or to miss out on any important news.

A smooth transition will leave you and your family free to enjoy your new home.

- Utilities: Find out about utilities (water, gas, electricity and phone) and what you need to connect (including costs) before the big move to ensure your life continues to run smoothly once you're in your new home.
- Schools: If your move involves a change in school for your children make sure this is sorted out well before the move. Include them in the decision process to help them get excited about the move, rather than being upset and anxious.
- Amenities: To help your family settle in, find out as much as you can about your new community so you can explore and discover it together. Establish the locations of any facilities that would appeal, such as sporting clubs, gyms, parks and even video shops.
- Neighbours: Pop over and say hello to your new neighbours. It's always handy to have a good relationship with the people in your neighbourhood, and they might have some tips to help you settle in quickly to the area.
- Budget: Moving into a new home is as good a time as any to take a look at the family budget and reassess your spending priorities, as well as factor in any changes that might have occurred now that you've moved. Keep in mind that interest rates may rise in the future – so make sure you factor this into your budget.

The best advice when making a move into a new home is to be organised and not to take the move too seriously. Enjoy discovering your new neighbourhood and make the most of that new home feeling!
